Excerpt: ... A. He took my name. I said, Just take the name of the Army and Navy League, but he took my name, and said, You,will get a letter from the Governor of Missouri; but we never did. Then we had trains all the time. We took men out of the windows on stretchers, and sent some to Fort Thomas and to the Marine Hospital and some to the Cincinnati hospital; but it was the same thing; that work is still going on. We have trained nurses there. Dr. Landee is still at work there. We had a physician at every depot all the time after we started. It seemed to impress me so, the lack of system and of feeling, that it was so much caused by the inefficiency of officers and not by the Government. The Government really could and would have supplied all these things if the men had known how to get them. Another thing about this Southern regiment. I met a very bright lady, a surgeons wife. Her father was a surgeon-general in the Confederate army. She said she thought the Northern men were making a great mistake in treating the typhoid fever as they would in the North. She said they didnt call that typhoid fever. I can not tell the name she used. The treafr ment, she said, is entirely different; but the surgeons here felt a great many deaths would be avoided if that fever was treated as it works in this climate. It seems to me there might be something in that. I know they give a terrible lot of Squibbss mixture. Burlington, Vt., November8. 1S9S. TESTIMONY OF MAJ. JAMBS M. JENNE. Maj. James M. Jenne then appeared before the commission, and the president thereof read to him the instructions received by the commission from the President of the United States, indicating the scope of the investigation. He was then asked if he had any objection to being sworn, and replied that he...
